Chapter 1 by ThunderRising

One dark night, in a faraway land, filled with dangers that could kill a mortal on sight and luxuries that were unthinkable, a castles floated down to the surface.

No creature could ever come inside the mysterious castle. There was invisible boundaries and invincible guards. Who knew what dangers could be lurking outside.

Even as the mortal technology improved, there was no way into the castle. All the civilians of the neighboring cities knew was that there was this great castle that not even all of the armies of the world could take down.

The only people who suspected something strange were the civilians of the kingdom.

They had thought all along that there was something strange. They knew that someone had to be inside the castle, a monarch that had kept their kingdom so powerful.

The only clues that the civilians had were rumors. These were from the guards that sometimes came out of the castle. They would come out every few years, spreading hope that there was a solution to their problem.

The rumors were very different but there was one that was know the most. This was the one that made the most sense to the civilians.

It was talked about at schools and at councils.

Even though the elders tried to stop the rumors from spreading, they had never succeeded.
